Captured Document Gives Instructions to Observers and Patrols.

TACTICS ONE QUESTION

Command Anxious for Minute Details on Behavior of Men on Duty and During Relief.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sunday, March 31 (By A. P.) .- German army leaders are exceedingly anxious to obtain information concerning the most minute detail of the American army. This is disclosed by a captured German docment issued to the Fifth Bavarian Landwehr Infantry Brigade, and which instructs every observer and patrol to do his or its best "to bring nformation about the new enemy. The results obtained are to be added to official reports.

The captured document starts out by giving details that are known, such as those regarding the American uniform, and adds that the infantry is equipped partly with English rifles and that the artillery probably has French guns. It says that American troops will continue training in France, adding: "Nothing is known as yet about

"From the preceding meager details," it continues, "it is evident that sectors K and M have the honorable task of obtaining as much in-formation as possible on particular feature of American fighting and outpost tactics. Under "enemy patrols," the docu ment asks, for details on "strength, methods of advance, behavior on meeting and initiative."
"These questions come under information on general behavior: "Are the Americans careful and cautious? And are they careful or noisy? What is their behavior during smoke screens? What is their behavior at meal times? In fighting the devil with fire we must take care not to burn our hands, or, as our fighting may blow it back into your own trenches." This is virtually the answer given by a notable array enemy peoples; or believe with Lord Lansdowne that some sort of negotiation with the enemy is possible; or hold with some of our pacifists that the war may be honorably ended without the complete and crushing defeat of German military power. The only way to deal with the "ban-

Like Mother, Like Child

The health of the nursing child mirrors the health of its mother. Rich, red mother-blood means a richly nourished, vigorous baby. Thin, weak mother-blood means a poor-blooded baby, and life goes hard with a poor-blooded baby. The nursing mother will find Gude's Pepto-Mangan a splendid general tonic, appetizer, and blood food.

Gude's Pepto-Mangan

"The Red Blood Builder'

Gude's Pepto-Mangan builds the blood from its very foundation, the red cells. It increases their number and power to carry life-giving oxygen to every organ, cell, and tissue of the body. Thousands of physicians have prescribed Gude's Pepto-Mangan for weak and run-down people of all ages, and millions of men, women, and children have used Gude's Pepto-Mangan. It is easily digested, promptly assimilated by the blood, and exceedingly pleasant to the taste.

PRESIDENT STILL STANDING ON HIS FLAG DAY SPEECH

Executive in Letter to Bishop Henderson Says His Attitude on Peace Is Unchanged.

FIRST TASK, 'WIN THE WAR'

Statement Will Be Used by Methodists for "Choking Out Pacifists."

NEW YORK, April 1 (By A. P.) -President Wilson has not changed his attitude concerning a negotiated expressed in his Flag day address, his reply to Pope Benedict and his nessage to Congress on the declaration of war with Austria, accord-ing to a letter he has written to Bishop Theodore S. Henderson of the Methodist Episcopal Church, made public here today by the National War Council of the church. Bishop Henderson wrote to the President in behalf of 20,000,000 American Methodists, asking in particular whether his present unwavering purpose was expressed in the following words from his messages:

"The German power, a thing with-out conscience, honor or capacity for covenanted peace, must be crushed.

* * Our present and immediate task is to win the war, and nothing shall turn us aside until it is accomplished."

The President's letter, dated March 25, follows: "In reply to your letter of March 21, may I not say that you are perfectly safe in using the words which you quote from my messages as expressing my unaltered thought and unbroken purpose? It is always our duty to find out what the expression of a desire for peace from our oponents really means, but unless it means a complete and convincing program of justice upon which a lasting peace can really rest (and we have had as yet no evidence that it means anything of that kind), it neans nothing."
The President's letter will be read from all Methodist pulpits in the country on April 7, and the National War Council announces that all Methodist ministers have been urged to use it as "a basis of a new and hearty backing of the President in the war and for the choking out of all pacifists."

The council also announced plans for collecting a fund to be used "in strengthening the churches near the army camps, both with buildings and helpers, so that the soldiers who desire can come into the nearby towns and get a homey church service. The church does not plan to ope separate buildings in the camps.

ROMAN L. BISKUP.

The happy faculty of investing his talents to good advantage in his early years has endowed Roman L. Biskup with the gift of expressing personality through the medium of fine tailoring.

When a young man, he saw the wisdom of relinquishing a position as journeyman tailor to accept one as a bushelman at the very humble salary of $13.00 per week: to learn more and so to eventually win the highest paid cutter's position in St. Louis. Tenacity of purpose, alone, was the guiding factor at that time which prompted Mr. Biskup to turn from a good salary to a very small one-to learn, from a different angle, the wondrous art of creating the master model. Nor has that constancy of purpose swerved for an instant.

Belief in his ideal of what the tailoring art should and must be has given to discerning St. Louisans a type of garment than which none finer is made the world over.

Never has Roman L. Biskup hesitated to share his knowledge of the master craft with others. Time and time again he has striven to give his best for the betterment of the trade.

BOARDER WHO STAYED AT HOME FOILS SPY

No-Brains Poser Saves American Transports in Play at the Garrick.

By CARLOS F. HURD.

used to be said that any man T used to be said that any man would fight for his home, but that no man would fight for a boarding house. But the hero of "The Man Who Stayed at Home," seen by an audience which filled the Shubert-Garrick Theater last night; is an exception.

The "home" at which he stayed was a boarding house in an English coast town. And he fought for it valiantly, most of the time with his wits, but now and then with his muscles and his marksman's eye. What he accomplished, so far as the audience saw, was to kill a carrier pigeon and keep the boarding house from being burned.

There was a good deal in the dia-logue supported by some off-stage signal lights and shot-firing, to indi-cate that he was also saving the transports, carrying the first American troops, from being torpedoed by the German U-11, which was off the coast at that point. And the last of the off-stage shots was supposed to have sent down the U-11, thereby serving the Huns jolly well right for Time Doesn't Quite Fit.

The American feature, which adds the play's interest here and now, does not fit very smoothly into the rest of the play, which unmistakably belongs to the very first days of the war in England. This would be war in England. This would be manifest even if one did not know that "The Man Who Stayed at Home" is a make-over of "The White Feather," one of the earliest of plays dealing with this war.
The English incidents shown in the play-girls handing white feathers to slackers. German waiters and governesses still flourishing in England, British recruits only half uni-formed—are true enough, but they were over long before the United States was sending troops abroad. However, these little anachronisms to be found even in Shakspeare, and Time's perspective smooths their

ough edges rapidly.

The man who stayed at home, and seemed to his fellow boarders to have no thought beyond a rubber of whist, or a fiver on the races, was in reality a spy foiler. This is not telling a secret, for the audience finds it out very soon after the play begins. The German spies suspect it all along, and the only person on whom it never dawns is the man's fiancee, whose nborn stupidity seems to promise her a great career as a diplomat's wife. The best scenes of the play are those in which the hero comes to grips with the chief of the German spies, who is the landlady's son, and with the waiter who is his despised underling. The play is made unduly lengthy by scenes in which the fiancee and her father muddle along. The plot might be improved by letting the girl break her engagement and marry the young chap on sentry duty on the cliffs. The hero could then discover that he had been in love, all the time, with he attractive young widow who elped him in the combat with Kul-

KELLERD'S HAMLET IS TRUE TO SHAKSPEARE

Virtues of Mind and Heart Paralyzed by Feeble Will.

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

HERE have been, no doubt, as many different Hamlets as there have been actors to essay this most fascinating and perhaps ambiguous of roles. But it is to be doubted whether any of the famous histrions who have undertaken the part came much nearer to Shakspeare's real intent than did John E. Kellerd last night at the American Theater. This intelligent tragedian has evidently assembled his conception of the Prince of Denmark through a common-sense and intensive study of the text itself, instead of from the cloud of interpretations and surmises with which ponderous commentators have darkened the play's meaning.

Hamlet seems to have been designed by his creator to represent that unfortunate type, often devoted to frightful sufferings, which combines immense cerebral activity and profound capacity for feeling with a strange lethargy of the will, which is incapable of bestirring itself to action save in climaxes of frenzy. The teeming thoughts and impassioned emotions shrink with a paralysis of repugnance from embodying themselves in deeds, but find vent instinctively in an outpouring of desperate words. To a man of this kind his own meditations and feelings are the real world in which he has his being; he is an exile from the universe of actuality; and enforced contact with the latter has for him all the agony of a nightmare.

Noble Nature Accursed.
Under normal circumstances such a temperament may escape disaster, end even be beloved for its sweetness and courtesy of disposition as well as for its remarkable intellectual energy. While the will has no great duty imposed upon it, its weakness may remain undetected. But upon Hamlet is laid the most terrible of curses, impelling him with fatal resistlessness to action of an appalling form. He is placed under the necessity of avenging the murder of his father upon his father's brother.

This Hamlet Not Mad.

It was evident at once that the Hamlet of Kellerd's portrayal would shatter himself in the struggle. His mind and his feelings represent to him with such vividness his duty to kill his stepfather, and his nature shrinks with such, palsying dread from the act, that he is bound to stand almost stationary between the two opposite pulls, though they are destined to rend him in pieces.

Only in a few cases is he aroused to resolution—when he goes to the platform to speak with his father's ghost, when he plots to make his stepfather betray himself by means of a play, and when he murders Polonious in mistake for the King. But between these ebullitions of action he is more occupied with the devastation of his own soul than with the oath pledged to his dead father. He by no means becomes mad, according to Kellerd's version, although his feverish mental activities and his sufferings give an appearance of aberration. But he is obviously a ruined man when he returns from England in the last act, and finding that his irresolute bungling has cost the life not only of Polonious, but of Ophelia, he goes with fortitude and even gladness to his own end.

Such a character may command affection and sympathy, but its weakness estranges it from our admiration and respect. We prefer to see a dramatic hero carrying out his plans firmly with a concentration of will, insteam of scattering his energies in words at the least provocation, as in the sollloquies, the address to the players and the oration ever Yorick's skull.

Kellerd made his Hamlet no herole figure, but one that aroused pity.

He is well suited physically for such a role, with his long and cadaverous face, trenched as if with lines of thought and grief, with his tall and fragile body, and with his voice, no ringing, heroic organ, but one made for the expression of melancholy and of dull, devouring despair.

Relierd's voice is considerably remete from being a musical instrument, and in fact shreds itself into huskiness at moments of stress. But he is so skilled in the placing of accent and the modulation of pitch, that even the longest speeches became absorbing feats of declamation. Occasionally in the soliloquies he seemed to be attempting a sort of musical speech, like a recitative, which struck oddly upon the ears after the carefully conversational reading of most of the lines.

Cast Drilled in Elocution.

In the matter of effective declamation Kellerd seems to have drilled hearly every member of his company. The cast was by no means distinguished, but the words were usually spoken by all with a lively sense of their meaning. Among those acceptable in this respect were Margaret Bulkley as Ophelia, Georgiana Wilson as the Queen. Charles A. Smily as Polonius, and especially Walter Hubbell as the ghost, with his chanting, cavernous tones. The settings and costumes were unexpectedly shabby, and at Elsinore there was not only a king but a sourt "of shreds and patches."

"Hamlet" will be repeated at a Wednesday matinee and Thursday night. "The Merchant of Venice" "It be presented tonight and at a saturday matinee; "Macbeth" will be undertaken on Wednesday and saturday nights; and "Othello" on omorrow and Friday nights. It will be noted that the chief character in two of the other plays is of the same passive type as Hamlet; Macbeth is friven along by superstition and the resolution of Lady Macbeth, and othello is led about by the nose un-

It was the theory that when a properly authorized body made a reort to the State Board of Equalization the latter actually would be compelled by public sentiment to accept its findings, but under the practical operation of the law this is merely theory, and the same old system is threatening to triumph.

Father John recommended this prescription to his parishioners and friends and in this way it became known as Father John's Medicine.

As the indications become more pronounced that the approval of the report will be defeated by the votes of Attorney-General McAllister, Sectorary of State Sullivan and Treasure Middlekamp, there is increased talk in official circles that the right of the board to refuse to equalize property, which would be the effect of a rejection of the report, will be contested in the courts.

The success of such a plan, some lawyers contend, probably would rest proper man to institute a mandamus

The plan, however, has not ap pealed to the Governor, who, accordpealed to the Governor, who, according to reports, has taken the position that it would be distasteful to him to bring an action against other State officers, in that it might interfere with harmonious relations between them in the future.

Man Found Dead on Bread Box. The body of an unidentified man was found on a bread box in front of a grocery at 4402 St. Louis avenue at 12:30 o'clock this morning. It appeared to be that of a man about 65 years old. The suit was gray and the hat a soft black. The

Allotment in Second Liberty

The amount of the Third Liberty oan, allotted to St. Louis, is $39,-107,350. This is $1.735,650 less than the city's share in the Second Liberty Loan, when the total amount of the loan was the same as the new offering, $3,000,000,000. The allotment for this Federal Reserve District, however, is $130,000,-000, as compared with $120,000,000 and local communities in the district have just been made by the officials of the Eighth Federal Reserve Disrict in preparation for the opening of the campaign next Saturday. Banking resources of cities and coun-ties have been used as a basis for the allotments and the smaller share given to St. Louis is accounted for by the fact that since the last loan pered and their banking resources

Those participating in the parade will assemble at 1:30 p. m. at their assigned stations. The procession will start from Lindell boulevard and Boyle avenue and proceed west over Lindell boulevard through the park via the Grand Drive to the foot of Art Hill, where a reviewing stand 70x300 feet has been erected and which will be occupied by the State and municipal authorities, officers from the army, navy and aviation branches, officers of the Third Liberty Loan and heads of other war

Large Reserved Space. The parade grounds are directly in front of the reviewing stand and south of this is reserved space for the parents and wives of men in service and the G. A. R. veterans, for whom there will be 24,000 seats. There will also be standing room for 2000 reserved for fathers of boys at the front.

A handsome service badge is to be given to those who have sons and husbands in the service. This badge is white satin ribbon with shield and two flags and an American eagle woven in brocade in colors, from which a service flag with red border and white field and blue star is suspended. The wearer of this flag will be admitted into the reserved

Remedy for Kaiser Cuddling.

From the Chicago Herald.

THE camouflaged disloyalty of our great cities could not stand prosperity. While the western front was in a state of watchful waiting, this disloyalty skulked behind a plous pretense of pacifism, or was gravely concerned lest this country lose its individual freedom in developing a military machine, or told discreet lies about the inisuse of Red Cross funds, or repeated horror romances of the trenches. But the Hindenburg drive brought it into the open, and there the Federal secret service was waiting for it, with handcuffs." A Kaiser cuddler simply can't contain his joyous emotions when he hears that someone else has been hurt. He has to clink glasses, blow off steam in boastful speeches, and this has been his undoing. in Chicago alone, the Federal authorities have been arresting close to 200 per day since the Teutonic offensive started on the western front. Some of these are released with small fines or a warning, but more are held, and there is a splendid chance to make the cleanup permanent.

Congress at last appears to be in a mood to make war in warlike fashion. Let it trike the first blow right here at home. Let it empower the executive department to do four things to every proved disloy-Forfeit his citizenship.

The Destructive Cat.

WALTER PRICHARD EATON in Harper's,
WHEN the question of establishing a cat license, as we now have a dor icense, comes up, the only economic argument your average legislator can see is on the other side. The cats catch rats in the farmer's barn. We mustn't do anything to lose the rural vote! The congressional wag makes a funny speech about pretty pursy and the old maids coming downtown to get their licenses, the legislative assembly titillates with mirth, and the bill is laid on the table. It would all be rather ar ing if it weren't so serious.

How serious it is a very brief survey of the figures will show. The figures, too, may well be taken from reports by Ed-ward Howe Forbush, State Ornithologist of dassachusetts, whose own Legislature has tabled a bill to license cats, with the usual display of Sunday-supplement humor. Mr. Forbush bases his figures on the reports of over a hundred observers throughout the state. "If we assume," he says, "that the average cat on the farm kills but 10 birds in a year, and that there are but two cats on each farm in Massachusetts, we have in round numbers 70,000 cats, killing 700,-000 birds annually." As a matter of fact, there are many more than 70,000 cats in Mussachusetts, even on the farms, and those which live near the open, even in the suburbs, take a toll of bird life that is probably in excess of 10 birds a year. A cat belonging to a neighbor of mine, not a farm cat, but a pampered house puss, brought 26 birds to the veranda last sum mer, and I have to wage a constant warfare on half a dozen sleek, well-fed house cats which daily try to catch birds in my garden. Doctor Forbush is too careful and conservative. The toll of bird life due to sachusetts is probably in excess of 1,000,-000 a year. To this huge total we must probably add another 1,000,000 for the toll taken by the domestic pets and stray cats and their descendants, now gone wild. Few people have any conception of the number of cats gone wild there are in our woods.

Now, undoubtedly, if cats were licensed as dogs are, and men appointed to disp immediate diminution of the feline population, still more noticeable in a second generation, for the females would pay a higher fee. The cats which remained would be those valued and cared for as pets (and if a person isn't willing to pay one or two dollars a year for his or her pet, his at-tachment isn't very strong) or else those cats valuable as destroyers of rodents. The stray cat, that has to hunt for a liv would be eliminated, as would the prese excess of half-stray house and barn cats. There would be little hardship-to the farmer, because a good barn cat earns its license fee; and, besides, very few cats are as effective as traps, anyhow, as careful experiments have again and again proved. Finally, an added revenue would accrue to the state.

But why go to all this trouble merely to save 2,000,000 birds a year? asks the sentimental cat-lover, who would rather have the cat than the bluebirds and song-sparrows, because he cannot pat a bluebird, nor dangle a string before its young. The answer is, because the birds help to maintain the balance in nature between destructive insects and growing things, between weeds and flowers, and any serious diminution in our bird population means a serious in-crease in the ranks of our insect and vege-table foes. The birds are among our best and most valuable friends, while the cat, artificially bred and introduced, does not belong to the natural scheme of things. ...

CHAPTER XXXVI.

O one but a fortune teller or professional seer dares to predict the condition of the world after this war. Only mere suggestions can be thrown out, shadows of prophecy as to what may come. Will the tide of emigration turn from Europe and the United States to

I made it my business after I had learned German to talk to many of the plain people in Berlin and elsewhere to get their views. I found that the common soldiers, especially those representing the class of skilled workingmen in the industrial centers were almost unanimous in saying that after the war and at the first opportunity they intended to leave Germany, to turn from a country capable of perpetrating this calamity on the world, a country where they have been subject not alone to military service, but to a cruel and oppressive caste system of discipline. I believe that Germany will enact laws against emigration and that there will be zones of espionage on all German frontiers designed to watch and keep back such Germans as may seek to escape to other countries.

I know that experts of the United frightful sacrifice the war has cost States Government believe at least the country and must cost still three millions of Slovaks, Greeks, etc., will leave America after the war, taking with them the money they have earned for investment in new opportunities in the Old Country and must cost still further, it is because they are sustained by the hope of help from America. In this hope they patiently tolerate the Americans also making patient to bear insult, more ready for war, unless this war ends all wars. they have earned for investment in new opportunities in the Old Country.

With this view I cannot agree. The soil of the European continent is too poor, wages too small, hours too long and distaste for the military and caste systems too great to tempt those who have tasted the equality and the freedom of America. Why, today an ordinary coal miner in Pennsylvania can earn $5000 a year —a sum greater than the pay of a total caste systems to produce the competition of American workmen, with the competition of American workmen, with the owners allow them to look into the German exporter has lost his the owners allow them to look into the secrets of their business, all so that the new ally may help to take revenge on the hated Germans."

It is Hendricks' plan to use the lineup in the games against Kansas City that will face the Browns next Saturday. It was Hornsby day at Fort Worth, but the young shortstop disappointed his home city admirers by his failure to knock the ball out of the lot each trip to the plate. It was the sixth victory of the series for the Browns. Manager Mike O'Neill used his three best pitchers, Beresky, Munzell and Napier. The Browns failed to get a man on in the opening three rounds, Gedeon hitting the only ball out of the infield. Beresky fanned three of the Brownies.

Errors Help Jones' Men. A walk and Sisler's single to right field, coupled with a costly error, resulted in two runs for the Browns in the fourth round, while Munzell was on duty. Smith doubled in the fifth, was sacrificed to third, and scored on Nunamaker's out.

Napier faced the Browns at the start of the swenth and Earl Smith.

Napier faced the Browns at the start of the seventh and Earl Smith gave the tall right-hander a warm reception with a triple. Nunamaker poled an easy drive to a country boy, who was getting his first tryout in right field. The ball cracked the Shreveport fielder squarely on the head, Nunamaker reaching third and Smith scoring. It was as comical a play as has been witnessed on this or any other ball field.
